

Dream Home Blueprint

Tool #2: Looking Ahead

Do you remember how much time you spent dreaming with your spouse when you were engaged or first married? Sometimes we let the disappointments of life convince us it's better not to dream.

Or we get so caught up in the daily grind that we just forget to take the time to dream. But our dreams are an intimate part of us that we can and should share with our spouse! They reveal what is important to us, and often what our deep needs are. Take a few moments to write your answers to these questions, then grab a glass of wine or a cup of tea, snuggle up together and share. Just remember that these are DREAMS! You do not have to make these happen! Instead, look at what is behind the dream, and you may learn what you can do to help meet your spouse's needs in your present circumstances.

In a perfect world I would love ...

... to live where?

... to have unlimited time to do what together? Why?

... to spend unlimited amounts of money on what? Why?

... to have people say what about us on our 50th wedding anniversary?
